ABSTRACT

Ayurvedic texts include a wealth of therapeutic information about medicinal herbs. Among them, Acharya Vagbhata's work has made a significant contribution to Ayurveda, as has the work of Acharya Charaka and Acharya Sushruta, who cooperated with their own contributions. Ayurveda provides a wide range of medicinal herbs that are particularly effective in the prevention and treatment of a wide number of dermatological conditions. Plant-derived medications have a long history of medicinal value and are well-tolerated. Ashtanga Hridya describes several treatments, both single and formulations, for the treatment of skin conditions. Plants and plant products are increasingly being used in medicine because they are less costly, have a natural foundation, and have higher safety margins. These Ayurvedic herbs can be used both internally and externally. Plants, particularly those with ethnopharmacological properties, were the primary sources of medicine for early drug development. This study provides a classical reference of herbs and formulas specified in Ashtanga Hridya for researchers, practitioners, and clinical aspects.

Keywords: Herbs, Twaka Roga, Ashtanga Hridya, Ethnopharmacological.

INTRODUCTION

The medicinal plants which have been described either under Kushtha Chikitsa in Ashtanga Hridya or primarily in the management of various Kushtha elsewhere in Ashtanga Hridya have only been considered for the present study. The medicinal plants having some secondary Kushtha Rogahara (skin disorders) activity but primarily described under other Roga Chikitsa such as Prameha have not been considered. The plants mentioned under the treatment of Shwitra (loss of pigmentation in skin) have also been included in the study as it is mentioned under Kushtha Chikitsa itself. Drugs used in the treatment of Kushtha/Shwitra in Ashtanga Hridya have been summarized here in following three categories:

• Single Drugs- The medicinal plants used singly.

- Formulations-1 The medicinal plants used as a part of the formulations. These have been considered in following two sub-categories.
- a. Non-designated formulations The formulation not titled by author.
- b. Designated formulations The formulations titled by the author himself.

DISCUSSION

For centuries, medicinal plants have had therapeutic potential for the treatment and management of skin disorders. Kushtha was a prominent ailment among humans in the early Vedic and Samhita eras, hence Sanshodhan Dravya (intoxication procedures) were thoroughly detailed by Acharya Charaka and Acharya Sushruta in their Samhitas. Later, Achaarya Vagabhatta worked on both Samhitas to create Ashtanga Hridya, a new concise samhita. Acharya Vagbhatta utilized various plants and herbal compounds to treat a variety of skin diseases. This review has summarized their work on skin disorders that may be valuable for researchers, practitioners, and pharmaceutical companies.
